Description

An elegant Richard Ginori Fiesole porcelain cache pot, richly decorated with romantic Italian scenes in the traditional Fiesole style. The finely painted panels depict a sunlit classical landscape, bringing together architectural ruins, trees, distant hills, and small figures in a palette of warm earth tones, soft greens, and atmospheric blue.

The scene is framed by refined decorative borders that complement the painterly imagery without overwhelming it. Its gently flared form and polished porcelain finish give the piece a graceful presence, whether used to display a favourite houseplant or styled as a decorative accent on a console, mantelpiece, bookshelf, or dining table.

Founded in 1735, Richard Ginori is one of Italy's most celebrated porcelain houses, admired for combining classical Italian design with exceptional craftsmanship. This cache pot captures that heritage beautifully: a decorative, practical, and highly collectible piece of Italian porcelain that works equally well in traditional and eclectic interiors.
